Introduction to the Association

Architects Without Borders brings together young architects and designers interested in public spaces and the social implications of architecture. The association aims to improve the quality of public spaces, increase public interest in architectural topics, and initiates and implements projects for disadvantaged groups. Since 2019, the organisation has been a member of the international network Architectes sans frontières.

Topics We Address

The general public does not perceive architects as a natural part of the process of creating both private and public spaces.
Architects often overlook the social responsibility inherent in their profession.2024.docx
Public spaces face numerous issues such as neglect, dysfunction, commercialisation, or the exclusion of certain social groups.

Our Proposed Solutions

Educational and popularisation activities about architecture and public spaces and their broader connections (organising public lectures, publishing and documentation activities)
Building contacts with experts from other professions (interdisciplinary cooperation)
Initiating and implementing projects in public spaces.

"We care deeply about the environment we live in. We try to use our knowledge and abilities to cultivate our surroundings and help create conditions for a contented life."
Karolína Kripnerová and Vojtěch Sigmund, Founders of the Association

Activities in the International Organisation Architecture Sans Frontières International

International Meeting of Architecture Sans Frontières International (ASF-Int) Members in Prague

13. – 15. 9. 2024

Organised by: Architects Without Borders, ASF INT
In cooperation with: ICWD CTU, Surya Civic Association, Faculty of Civil Engineering CTU

In October 2024, the annual meeting of the international ASF International organisation was held in the atrium of the Faculty of Civil Engineering at the Czech Technical University in Prague. The programme included an exhibition, expert presentations, and an interactive workshop, open not only to members of national chapters but also to the broader public.2024.docx
A key part of the programme was the international ASF exhibition, where member organisations from various countries presented their work on a series of posters. Visitors could explore diverse projects connecting architecture with social and environmental responsibility.
The event commenced with a Get Together session, in which representatives of various organisations introduced their activities through brief dynamic presentations. This block enabled participants to become acquainted and establish new contacts.
A major highlight was the World Café format workshop, during which mixed groups discussed topical issues—such as possibilities for reconstruction following demolition. Participants shared experiences, sought joint solutions, and presented the results of their discussions to all attendees.

Exhibition: Whose Problem Is It? Homelessness Between Prague and New York

14 March 2024 – 4 May 2024, VI PER Gallery

The exhibition 'Whose Problem Is It?' was created as a collaboration between architect Karolína Kripnerová and artist Janek Rous, both of whom have long engaged with social topics such as housing shortage, exclusion, and homelessness, from both architectural and contemporary art perspectives. The impulse for the exhibition was Karolína's research residency in New York in spring 2023, funded by a Fulbright scholarship at the Community Solutions organisation, which broadened the topic by including the American context.2024.docx
The exhibition explored homelessness and housing insecurity through four thematic lenses, drawing on both Czech (European) and New York (American) contexts. Insights from New York offered a broader understanding of social issues and suggested ways to alter the trajectory of developments in Europe. The main sections addressed:

1. The visibility of homelessness in public space
2. Who is a person without a home?
3. Myths about affordable housing and homelessness
4. New York racism and targeted social exclusion

The final part presented two paths: where things might lead if society continues to deny the housing crisis and homelessness as problems, and where progress may come if society accepts ownership of these issues, stimulating discussion and action toward change.

Guided Tours of the Exhibition

During the exhibition, twenty guided tours for the general public were held, attended by primary and secondary school pupils as well as university students (architectural and non-architectural). Special tours were done for a Fulbright Commission delegation and representatives of the Prague 1 administration and social curators.

Housing Inaccessibility in the Czech Republic – Whose Problem Is It? Accompanying program, discussion

April 9, 2024, VI PER Gallery

A discussion with Barbora Bírová and David Valouch took place as part of the accompanying program for the exhibition Whose Problem Is It? Homelessness Between Prague and New York. What is the current situation with housing affordability in the Czech Republic? Do we have social housing? What is Housing First and can we find this approach in the Czech Republic? Why was the Platform for Social Housing created, what are its current activities, and what is the goal of the Za bydlení (For Housing) initiative? We will discuss these and other questions with Barbora Bírová, director of the Platform for Social Housing, and David Valouch, advisor for Housing First and ending homelessness.

Barbora Bírová is the director of the Platform for Social Housing and co-author of the publication "Systemic Solutions to the Housing Crisis for Families and Individuals at the Municipal Level: Suggestions and Recommendations for Cities and Municipalities with High Levels of Housing Crisis," which serves as a practical guide for officials and politicians on setting up a system to reduce the housing crisis in municipalities. She has long been involved in the issue of systemic ending homelessness. (Note: B. Bírová fell ill on the day of the event and was replaced by press spokesman Petr Schovánek).

David Valouch is an advisor on ending homelessness and a Housing First advisor. He has long been involved in developing the Housing First model in the Czech Republic and helps teams implement projects.

Homelessness in Prague – Whose Problem Is It? Accompanying program, discussion

April 23, 2024, VI PER Gallery

A discussion with Ester Pacltová and Aleš Strnad took place as part of the accompanying program for the exhibition Whose Problem Is It? Homelessness Between Prague and New York. What is the current state of homelessness and care for homeless people in Prague? How has the situation developed and where is it heading now? And where can we find inspiration? What is the mission of the organizations Naděje and Místní místním? We will discuss these and other questions with Ester Pacltová (Místní místním) and Aleš Strnad (Naděje).

Ester Pacltová is the co-founder and director of the non-governmental organization Místní místním. She has experience working with homeless people from various non-profit organizations, has worked at the Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs, and has dealt with migration issues abroad. In 2023, she published the book Bez Předsudků (Without Prejudice) with Místní místním.

Aleš Strnad has been dealing with the issue of homelessness since 2000. He works at the Prague branch of the Naděje organization. He is the co-author of the book Bezdomovectví v kontextu ambulantních sociálních služeb (Homelessness in the Context of Outpatient Social Services). He considers educational and lecture activities on the topic of homelessness to be beneficial, important, and necessary.

Participatory Workshop on the Janov Housing Estate (Litvínov)
Summer–Autumn 2024
Organised by: Architects Without Borders, MY Litvínov
In cooperation with: MY Litvínov, Socionaut, Alžběta Petrův, Publicspacelab

In 2024, Architects Without Borders, in cooperation with MY Litvínov and Janov housing estate residents, executed a participatory project aimed at improving public space. The project built on previous activities (such as a mini film festival) and throughout the year included surveys, interviews, and the creation of an emotional map. Suggestions from local residents helped identify key areas for intervention. The culmination was a community event where the improvement of a particular green area and the installation of benches—recycled from a Prague warehouse—was agreed upon, with the appearance and placement of benches decided collectively, including voting on colours.
The project's outcomes included not only tangible improvements to public space but also strengthened community ties and involved local residents, especially children and youth, in planning and realisation. Although a grant request to the European MARIO fund (supporting minorities) was unsuccessful, the organisation continues its efforts in participatory, community-driven development.

Architects in Socially Excluded Localities

14 March 2024
Organised by: The Architecture Gallery, Brno

At the beginning of 2024, the association gave a lecture in Brno’s Architecture Gallery on the issue of socially excluded localities—areas often stigmatised as "ghettos" or "bad addresses", which arise from a mix of social, economic, and planning factors. The lecture emphasised that decisions in architecture and urban planning greatly influence these areas, and considered how architects can contribute to preventing or alleviating such social exclusion. The association also presented its activities in participatory projects in locations such as Bedřiška (Ostrava), Chanov (Most), and Janov (Litvínov)

Vinohradská 2.0 – Guided Walk on the Future of Vinohradská Avenue

10 and 19 October 2024
Organised by: Architects Without Borders
In cooperation with: Municipal Library, Prague

This walk, co-organised with the Prague Municipal Library, aimed to highlight planned upgrades to Vinohradská Avenue—a major city boulevard and key traffic artery linking several parts of Prague. The route led participants from Jiřího z Poděbrad Square to Olšany Cemeteries. Initial stops focused on the history and redevelopment since the 2015 concept study; subsequent stops discussed specific sites, planned and implemented changes, and broader values and challenges. Major themes addressed included calming traffic, prioritising pedestrians, accessibility, tram and bicycle traffic, upgrading public-space amenities, green infrastructure, and citizen participation.

The best solution to homelessness is prevention, not spikes on benches, says co-founder of Architects Without Borders

Pozitivní zprávy, April 16, 2024, interview, Karolína Kawuloková

Article summary:

A housing crisis, a sudden loss of income, or simply a combination of unfortunate circumstances. According to architect Karolína Kripnerová, these are the most common causes of homelessness. In our interview, we discussed not only the lack of affordable housing and socially sustainable architecture, but also homelessness abroad. "Every society is different, so of course you can't take the Finnish recipe and apply it to the Czech environment. But we can adopt the principles," says the co-founder of the Architects Without Borders association.

A walk through hostile architecture in public space

ČtArt, April 27, 2024, invitation

Event description:

“The fundamental attribute of public space is that it belongs to everyone and should be accessible to all without restriction. But is it really welcoming to the whole of society? On a walk, participants will learn about manifestations of so-called hostile architecture, which pushes certain groups of people out of public space. Homeless people are most often the target of exclusion, but everyone suffers from hostile measures. Along the way, participants will also learn about examples of good practice.”

Report from the exhibition Whose Problem Is It?

Artyčok.TV, May 4, 2024, report by Jan Vidlička and audio recordings of discussions about the exhibition

Today, we perceive homeless people as a common sight on the streets. Their numbers are growing, paradoxically especially in wealthy cities. Whether we walk through Prague or New York, the situation is the same, differing only in the number of people in need and the system in which they operate.

The exhibition Whose Problem Is It? at VI PER was created in collaboration between architect Karolína Kripnerová and artist Janek Rous, who have long been involved in social issues such as housing affordability, exclusion, and homelessness.

The report from the exhibition is supplemented by audio recordings from the accompanying program and a blog with more detailed information and sources for the chapters of the exhibition.
